Dear Don:

Here's the Organization for International Economic Policy section of the Murphy Commission Report on the Organization of the Government for the Conduct of Foreign Policy. It is really my report. I had Paul Volcker as the principal drafter but, not unexpectedly, I came out in favor of State taking the leading role and Paul came out in favor of Treasury taking the leading role. You will note, however, that I had a coordinating mechanism in the White House and I like Peter Flanigan's idea of converting the Special Trade Representative into that mechanism. This would give it some operational clout and staff, as well as the capability of pulling the whole thing together from a national perspective.

Best regards.

Yours,

William J. Casey
